

Book Art Museum opened on 1 October 1993 with the 15th book published by Correspondance, the linking of these two was in a villa originally owned by Henryk Grohman. Correspondance publishes books in editions of around 100.

During the two years since its founding, the Book Art Museum has organized nine exhibitions of book art, including five presenting the work of foreign artists, three theatre presentations, three meetings with artists, and more than a dozen shows of books published by Correspondance, accompanied by lectures. The Tryznos are busy people They are also creating a library of "books about books" taken from their own collection of books and asking others to donate to the Museum.

The Museum contains printing, papermaking and wooden and metal type and will be installed as soon as they manage to acquire the former factory building situated next to the Grohman villa. The purpose is to preserve some of the technical and material culture of producing books that is now facing extinction. Financial support to maintain and use the equipment, create workshops, invite people from other countries. In addition, the building needs major repairs but donations are needed to get the museum up to the standards for heating and plumbing to make the whole operation feasible.. The address is Correspondance des Arts, Muzeum Ksiazki Artystycznej, Tymienieckiego 24, Lodz, Poland.
